OLD BUILDINGS.—Two of the oldest buildings of the city are now under the hands of workmen, but for very different purposes, one for repair, the other for demolition.

The first of these buildings is a frame house, and was built probably about 1750, certainly before 1760, and it stands yet at the northeast corner of King and Fairfax streets, and is being thoroughly repaired in every part. It was occupied during the war of the Revolution by G. M. Wm. Harris, whose family occupied it until about twenty-five years ago. It stood on the hill and the river came in as it lay north of the town to water street, and lay the base of the hill. When the street was cut down, about 1780, the cellar became a lower story, and has since been used as a store. Mr. Shaw, its present owner, is removing it in the most substantial manner and will probably be another century.

The second building is the "Parsonage" of St. Mary's Church, on Duke street. A portion of this building comes down from Revolutionary days. It was formerly attached to the Methodist Church that stood on a portion of the site now occupied by St. Mary's Church, and when (in 1794) the Methodist congregation, then worshipping in a small lot, took up collections to buy it, one of the leading subscribers was Bernard Bryan, the ancestor of several leading Alexandrians. "He was a young man who, with his 'kit' in his back, walked all the way from Baltimore to Alexandria, opened a little shop and established himself in his honorable trade of shoemaker. By dint of industry, prudence and perseverance young Bryan was successful, and soon saved five French crowns, a word which was known to the town. A few years afterward he was called upon by the Rev. Ezekiel Cooper, first back agent of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to know 'how much he could contribute toward a little meeting house,' as he looked upon the young man he thought, 'there is a poor young brother, I cannot ask or expect much from him.' The visitor was cordially welcomed, however, and stated the object of his mission. Young Bryan arose from his seat, ascended a ladder to his humble lot, and taking one of the crowns proceeded downward. He had descended but a few feet when he thought, 'I can spare him two crowns.' Instantly he returned to his chest, and with another—now two crowns—made his way downward. At about half way down the ladder, another pause. Said the noble Bryan: 'I am young, plenty of work—I will give him three crowns.' Back again with nimble feet he approached his chest and took therefrom a third crown. Down the old ladder he went again, thoughtfully, and reached a step a little lower than on either of the former trips, when he said, almost audibly, 'One crown will be enough for me and the preacher shall have four crowns.' So he immediately returned as before, now with four crowns in his hand. He reached the floor. At the foot of the ladder, his suit again seemed to swell with joy and gratitude at the prospect of a new meeting house, and he said, 'I will give him all.' Heavily returning to the lot he took the last crown from his chest, came down, and in a most hearty manner, handed the five crowns to Mr. Cooper, who was surprised exceedingly at the sum as well as the liberality of the young Methodist shoemaker of Alexandria. In 1804 the house was bought and a Methodist Church erected on part of the lot. About 1809 the Catholic congregation, then worshipping in a church at their grave yard on the corner of Washington and Church streets, purchased this lot from Richard Libby, Wm. Humphrey and Jacob Hoffman, trustees of the M. E. Church, when they moved to Washington street, and about the same time the following bequest was made by a French merchant, Ignatius Jougla:

"I give and bequeath to my beloved friend, the Reverend Francis Ignatius Neale, of Georgetown College, District of Columbia, all my real and personal property, whether it be land, houses, money, goods, stocks or chattels, and which were brought down the C. & O. Canal, were taxed to Quantico to-day."

F. A. Kerby, auctioneer, sold to-day for C. E. Stuart, commissioner, a lot of ground on Alfred street near Queen, 19 feet 6 inches by 70 feet, to George Johnston for $200.

Letters addressed to Winfield Scott, Washington, D. C.; Joseph Pliskett, Sorton Valley, Va. and W. J. Smith, Paris, Va., are detained in the postoffice here for want of postage.

BOATMEN'S STRIKE.—The strike of the canal boatmen for higher rates of freight is now a topic of much interest in coal trade circles, and incidentally, of course, among the large number of persons here who are employed by the companies or who derive trade from them. The following extracts will consequently prove of interest. The Cumberland News says:

"The shipments of the different companies by canal from this port yesterday were about up to the average, but the cargo was rather small, the American Company not having loaded any boats because they had none in port. This was owing partly to the fact that their boats are not being unloaded rapidly at tide water and partly because the Alexandria operators still adhere to their opinion that the threatened strike of the boatmen will amount to nothing for various reasons. On the other hand a captain of one of three boats that arrived yesterday brings news of a decided stand about to be taken by the boatmen for the loading operators still adhere to their opinion that the threatened strike of the boatmen will amount to nothing for various reasons. On the other hand a captain of one of three boats that arrived yesterday brings news of a decided stand about to be taken by the boatmen for the loading operators still adhere to their opinion that the threatened strike of the boatmen will amount to nothing for various reasons.
